

Deaths, Delays, and Doubts of Academic Projects

written and illustrated by Lana Yarosh

(inspired by Edward Gorey's Gashlycrumb Tinies)

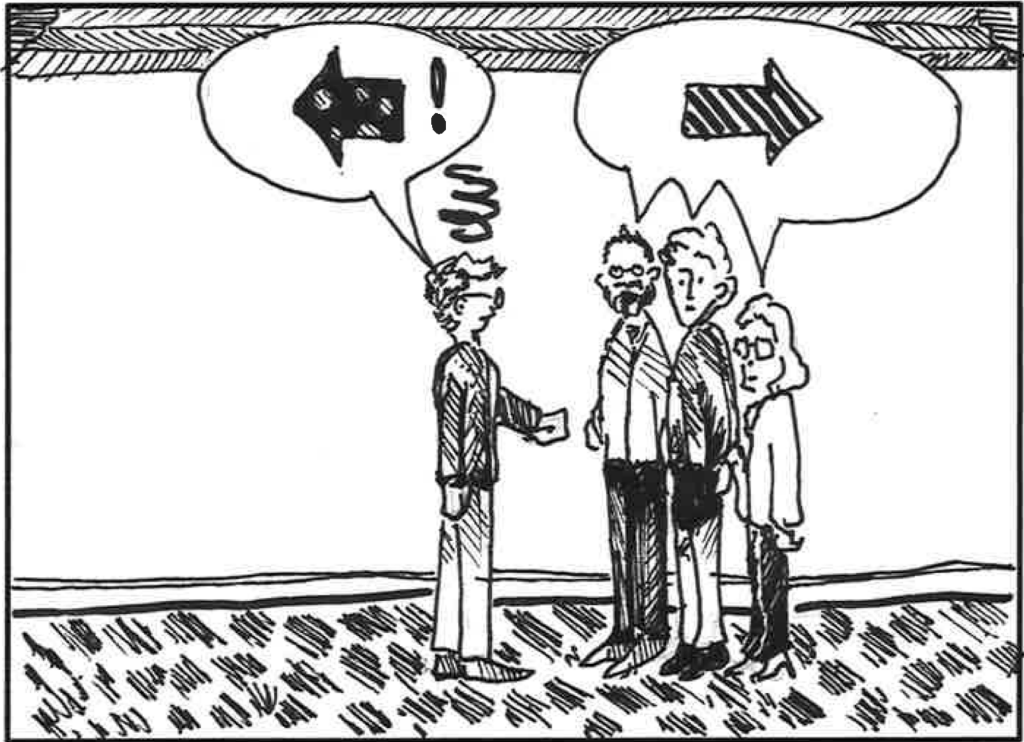

A is for the Analysis which We Didn't Explain

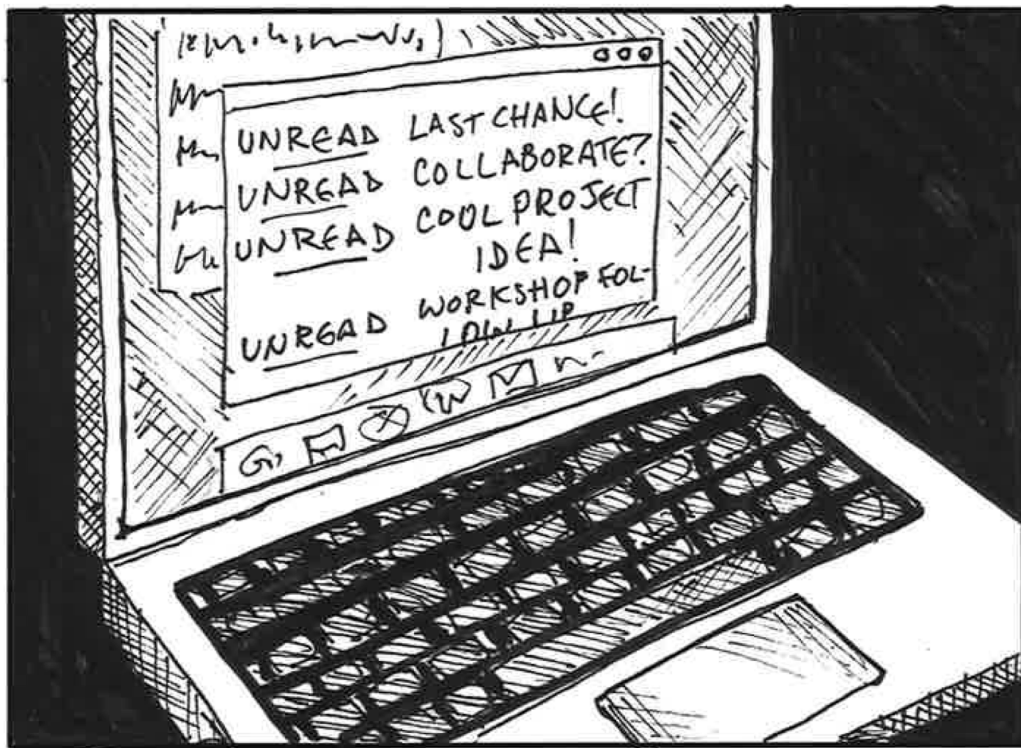

B is for the Best Practice that I Couldn't Sustain

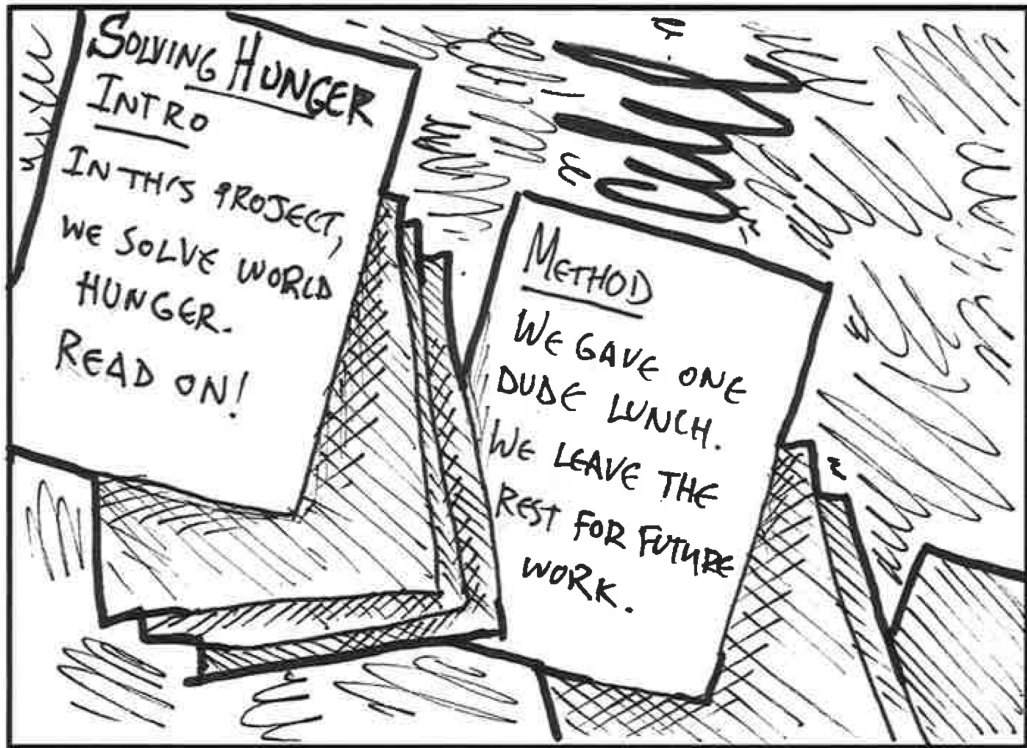

C is for the Citation that Was Really Needed

D is for the Debate that I Should Have Conceded

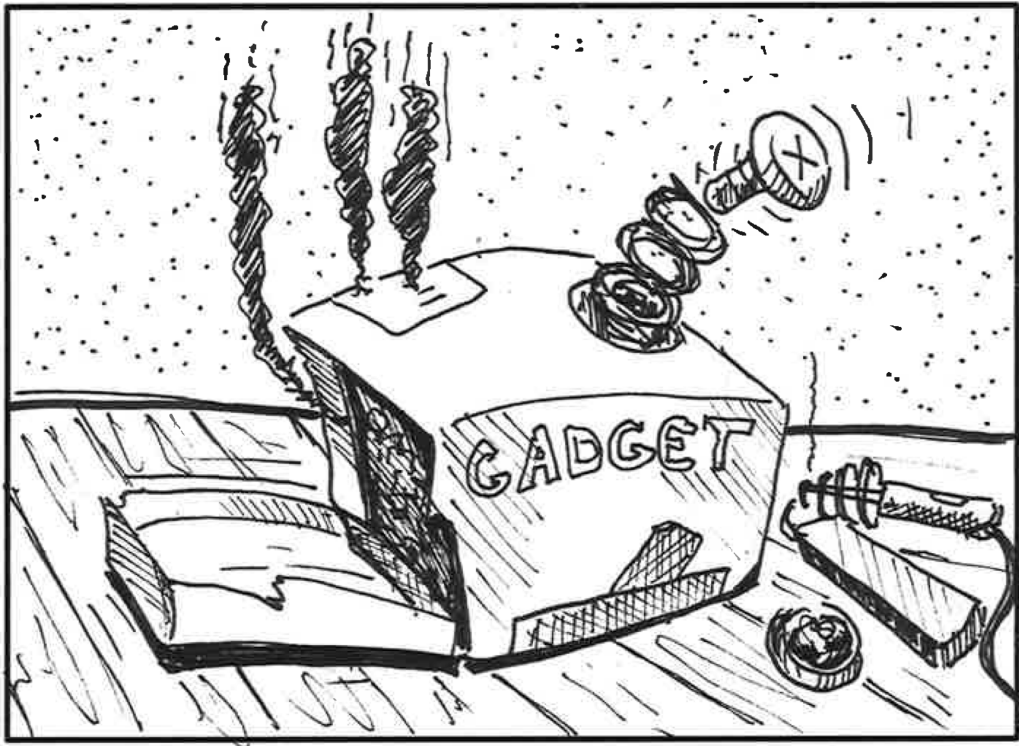

E is for the Email that I Didn't Touch

F is for the Framing that Promised Too Much

G is for the Graph with an Unexplained Quirk

H is for the Hardware that Just Didn't Work

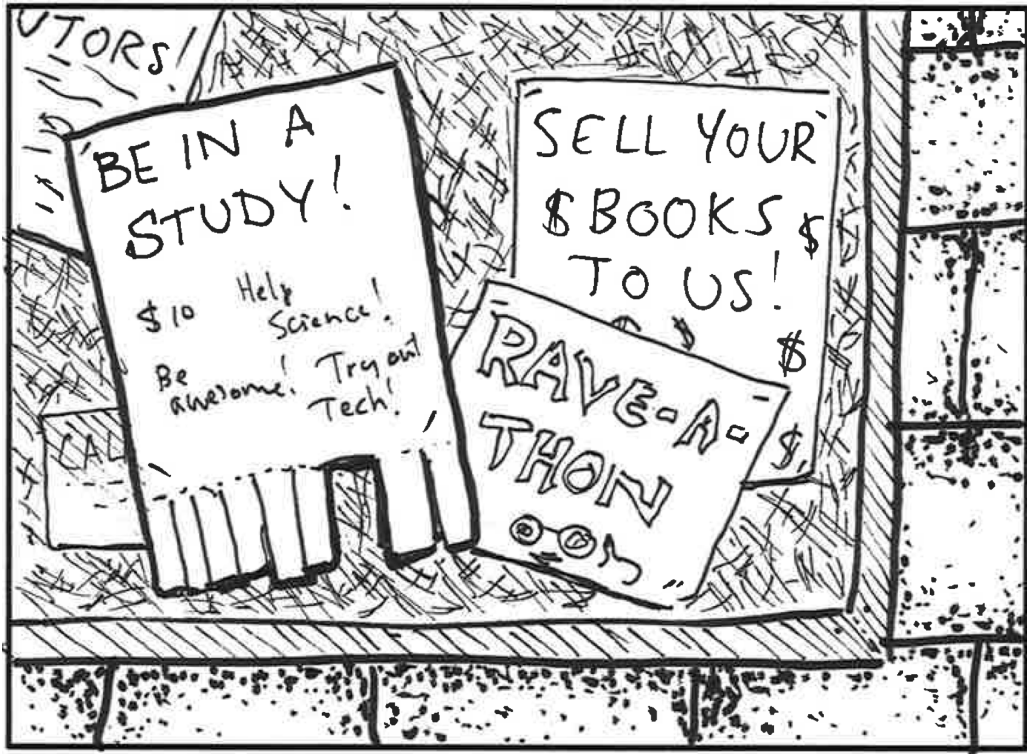

I is for the "I'll Do It Later, You'll See"

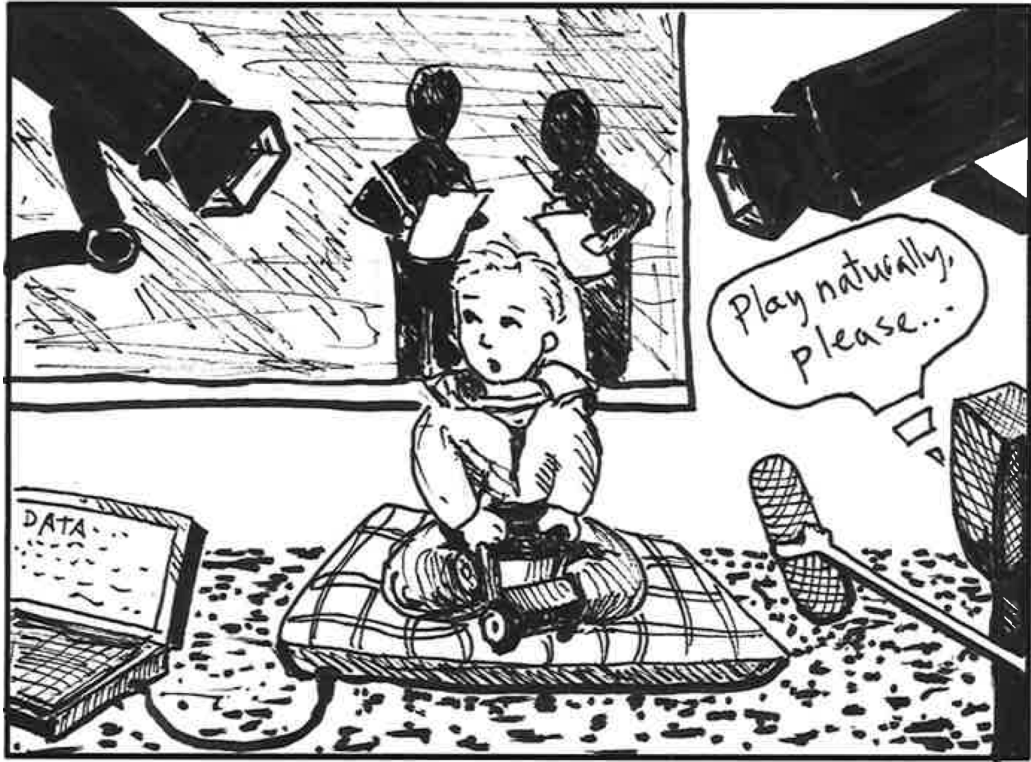

J is for the Java that still Couldn't Wake Me

K is for the Keenly-Cutting Early Critique

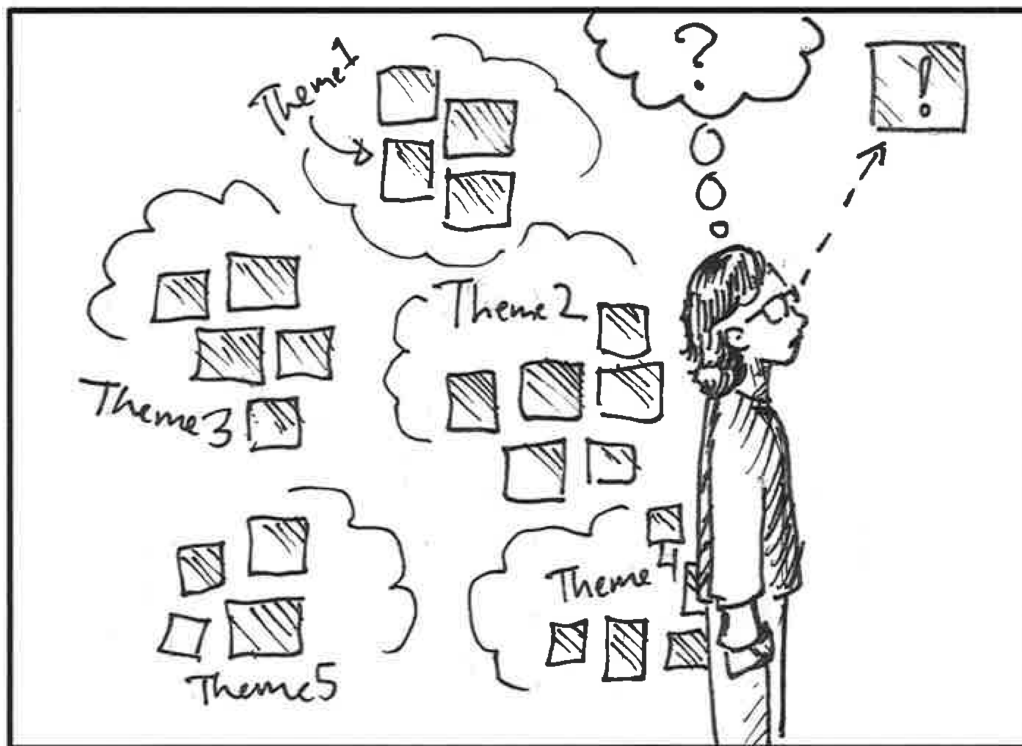

L is for the Limitations of Our sampling Technique

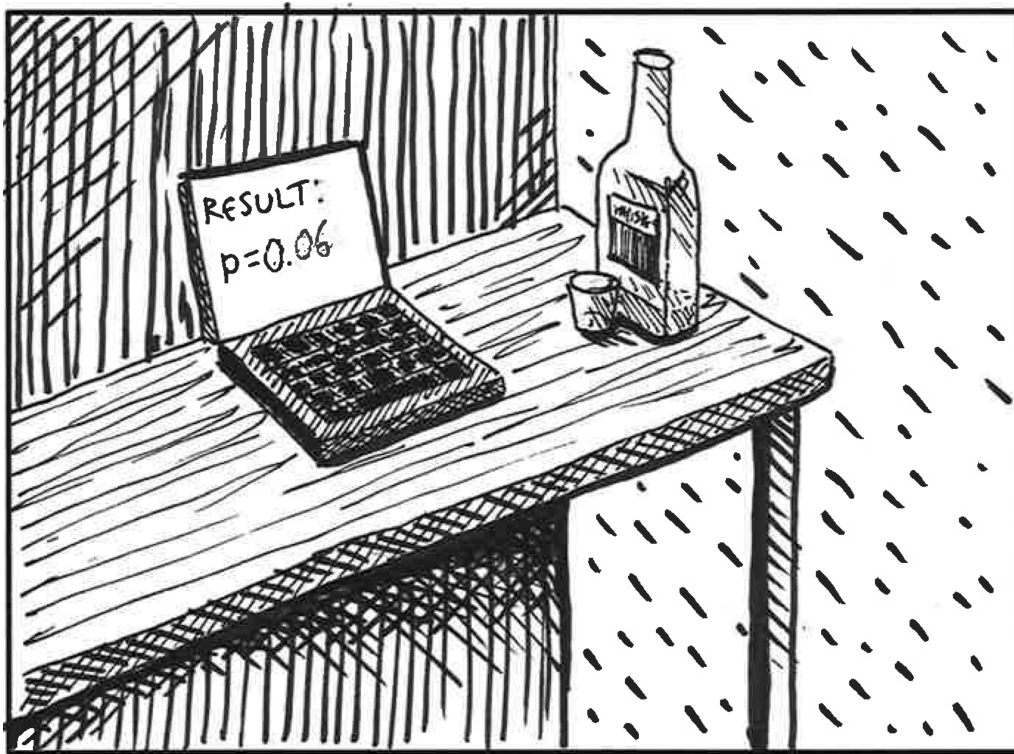

M is for the Methodological Problem We Couldn't Prevent

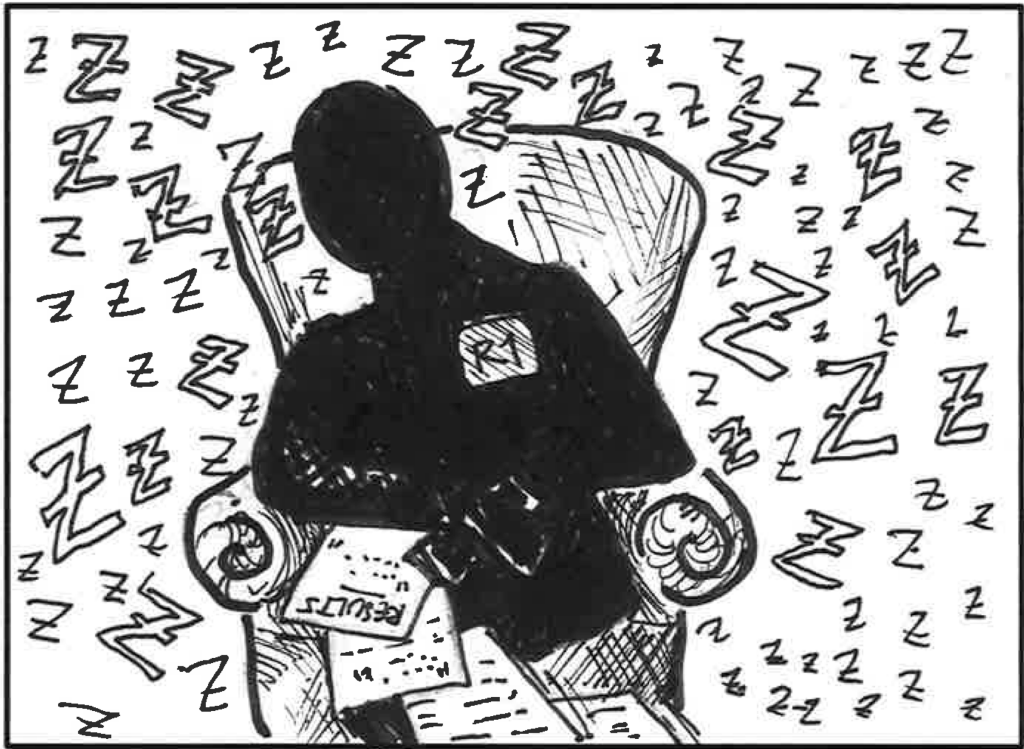

N is for Never Getting Parental Consent

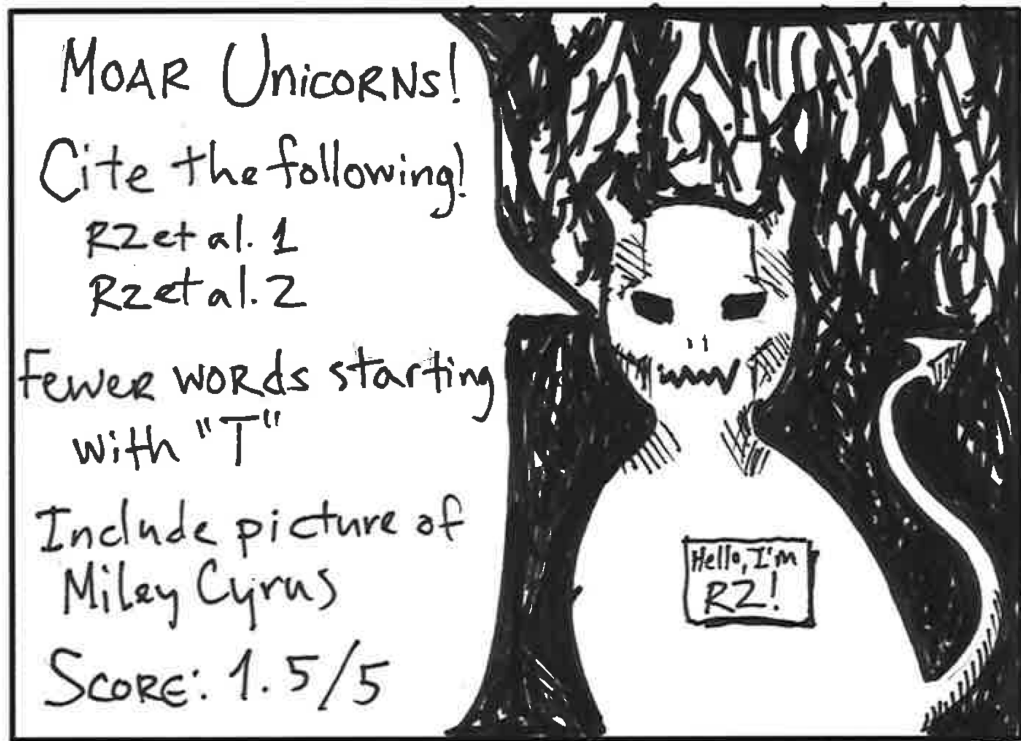

O is for the Outliers We Couldn't Nix

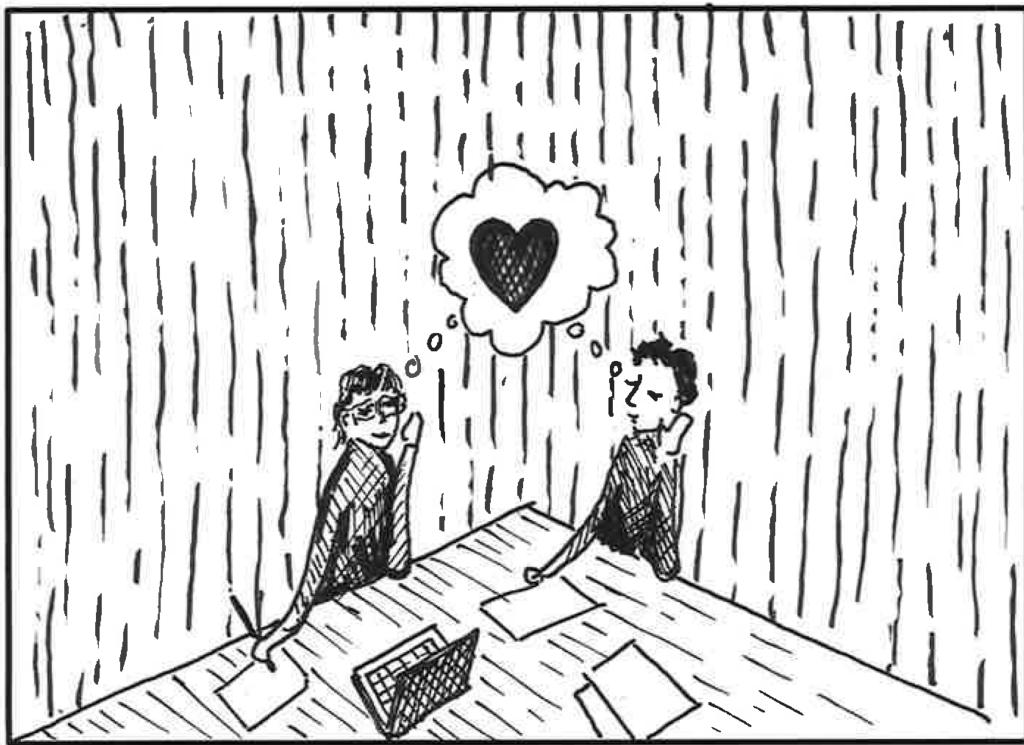

P is for the P-Value at Point Zero Six

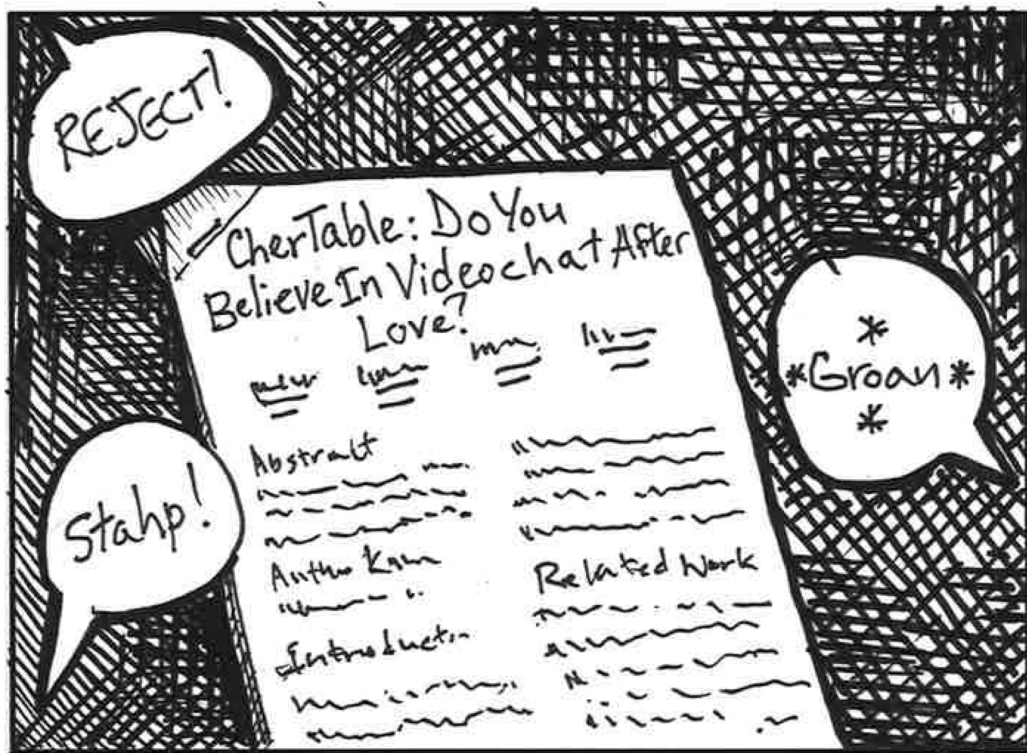

Q is for the Quotes that Failed to Excite

R is for Review Two that Just Wasn't Right!

s is for the side Project with that special someone

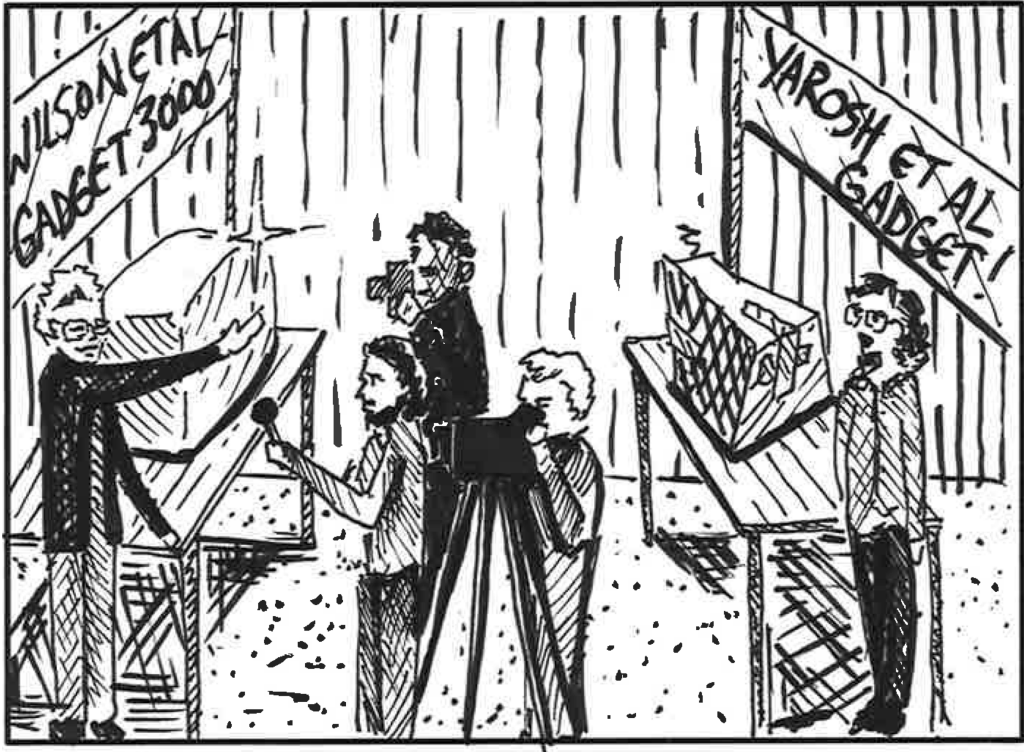

It is for the Title with a Terrible Pun

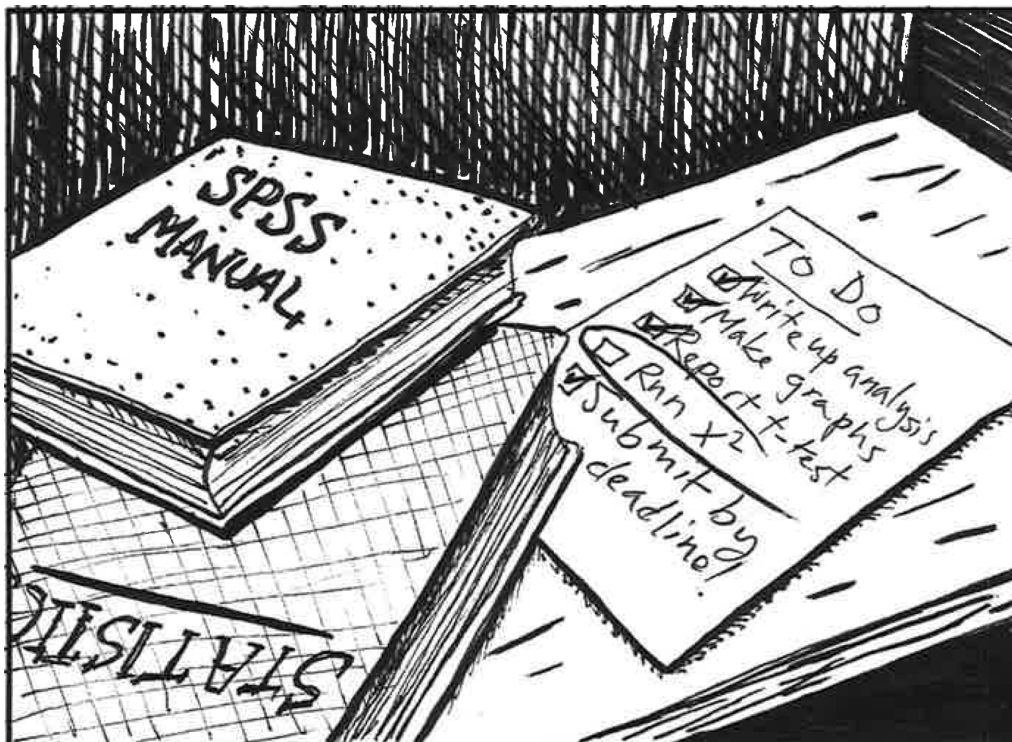

U is for the Undergrad Who Never Got Data

V is for the Version that Never Got to Beta

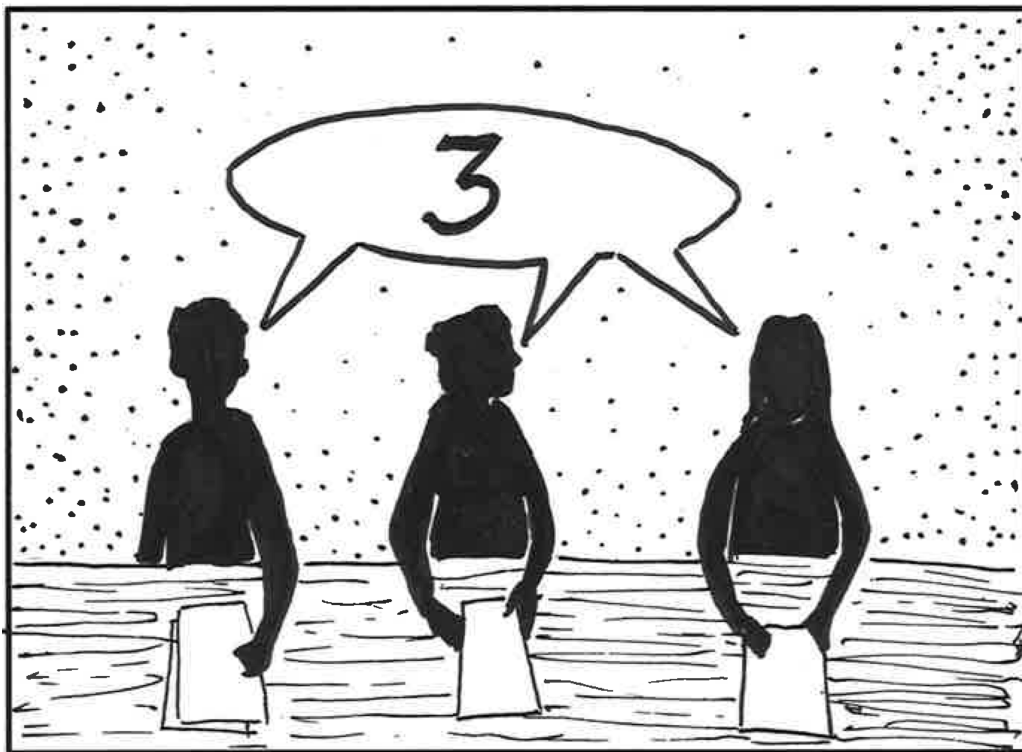

W is for Wilson, A. — Always First to the Tech

χ is for the χ^2 which I Didn't Check

Y is for Yelling in a Rebuttal: "I Don't Agree!"

Z is for Zero Reviews Higher Than Three

Thank You to...

... Gregory Abowd for all of the “D”ebates and “K”een critiques that have contributed to my research in immeasurable ways

... Eugene Medynskiy for turning “S” into an engagement, even if it didn’t lead to a paper

... Andrew Miller for the pun in “I”

... Andy Wilson for being cool about being called out in “W”